Washington, June 18.--Unless there are unforeseen developments to hurry construction of the sixteen cantonments for training the new national army, the first increment of 650,000 troops will not be in training by September 1st, as generally has been supposed, and in fact may not get into training for six weeks thereafter.

War department officials generally had fixed September 1st in their minds as the time training would begin. The first body of officers for the new army now being trained in camps throughout the country is to be turned out in August to make room for the next body. This was arranged on the plan of having the draft complete, exemptions disposed of, and troops ordered into training camps by September 1st.

To Regulate Contracts.

Washington, June 18.—The sixteen great cantonments for the new army will be built under a special form of contract, by the terms of which no contractor will be permitted to overcharge the government. The maxinum profit on any contract being fixed at $250,000. The government also will have complete supervision over the work and may terminate any contract at will.

The contractor is to be paid for his expenses and percentage of their total amount out of which he must meet his overhead cost.

JOB AND THE WAR ONLY TEMPORARY

London, June 18.—Appearing before an army tribunal recently, a firm of munition importers claimed exemption for a man twenty-eight years old because of indispensibility. The importers asserted their business had been increased $20,000,000 by the war, partially through the efforts of the man for whom they claimed exemp-

"The salary hardly corresponds to the profits," grumbled the magistrate. "If we grant this man an exemption, and he asks for an increase of salary, will you give it to him?"

"I really don't know," replied the employer.

"Well, suppose we should meet with an accident what would you do?"

queried the magistrate.
 "That would be only temporary."
 "So is the war," fairly yelled the court, and ordered the man to join up.

Washington, June 18.--Reduction of high prices of foodstuffs to the American people through conservation and elimination of waste, in which housewives are asked to cooperate, will be the aim of the new food administration, according to plans announced by Herbert C. Hoover. His plan contemplates the enrollment between July 1 and 15 of American housewives in the movement.

AUSTRIAN MILITARY STATION BLOWS UP

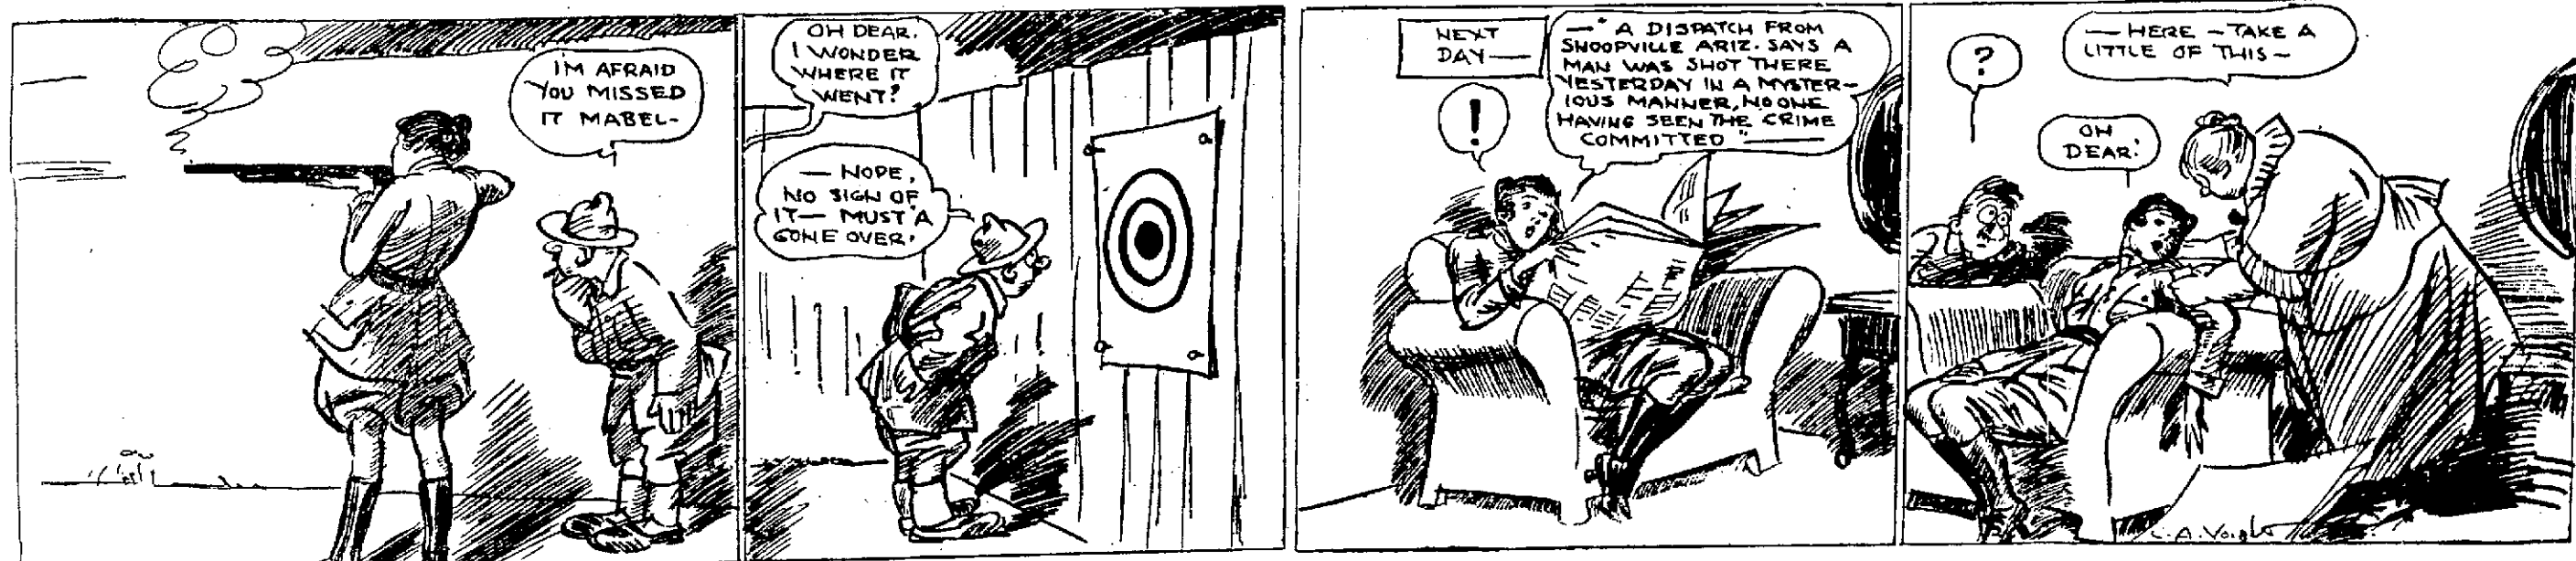

Vienna, June 18.—It is officially announced that an explosion has occurred in the military munitions depots at the Steinfeld, near Weiner-Neustadt, thirty-one miles from Vienna. The statement says that three of the depots have been destroyed, thus far, and 100 persons are reported to have been injured.

FOHL SUCCESSFUL
AS TEAM LEADER

Picking up a baseball club torn by dissensions and lacking in discipline, Fohl has succeeded in turning out an American league baseball club that is not only able to hold its own with any of the other clubs, but for a time last season was a prominent factor in the pennant race, and has been knocking up some of the best season averages in the league.

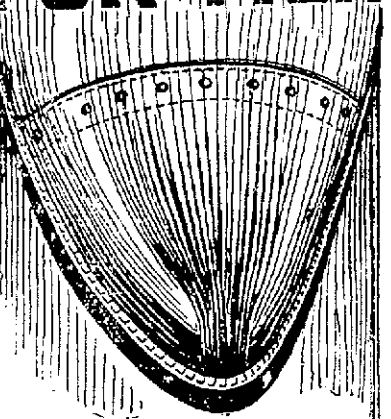

Perhaps the best success of Fohl has been in his development of pitchers, Covalleskie, Lambeth, Bagby and Gould have all been developed under the tutelage of Fohl. Joe Wood has been purchased, and reports say he is showing something again in spite of the fact that his first start was a defeat.

Fohl has been given the backing of a true sportsman, who will open the purse strings wide to buy ball players. He has the opportunity of going even farther in his quest for a pennant.

Fohl's success differs widely from that enjoyed by other big league leaders, in that he has developed most of the stars who exert on the field almost brought a pennant to the sixth city under the leadership of Joe Birmingham have all drifted away. The pitching staff is all Fohl's endeavor, and the infield is taking on that kind of an appearance.

If Fohl ever wins a pennant it will be with material he himself has brought into the majors, and not the result of the success of some other man in developing men.

Many conservative advertisers are using the classified columns. They find it pays.

The ability of the big time players to throw balls impressed representatives of the English government when they were at Washington a short time since. They gave it as their opinion that the ball players would be adept at throwing hand grenades. These grenades are a little heavier than the regulation ball used in the major leagues, but this additional weight would not interfere in any degree with the players' ability in finding their mark.

REJUVENATED CARDS
BEAT JEFFERSON, 4-1

LOCALS STAGE GREAT EXHIBITION YESTERDAY AND WIN FROM VISITORS IN WONDERFUL BATTLE.

TEAM IS STEM-WINDER

New Men At Players and Will Be Retained.—Watertown, League Leaders, Here Next Sunday.

Janesville's revamped Cardinals delivered yesterday in sparkling baseball, and Jefferson's sausage men of the Central State league went home on the short end of a 4 to 1 count. The Cards forged to the front in the first, after two were out, and with Flene pitching superb ball and backed up by dazzling support it was all in their favor.

"Kitty" Knight of Waupun, who pranced around the initial sack for the Cards, was a demon at the stick, and as for gathering in the high and wide ones he has not a peer around the entire circuit. "Kitty" in four times up banged out three healthy singles, and his hit in the eighth opened the rally which placed the game in the jewel casket for the Cards. At first he accepted fifteen chances with but a single pass.

Flene was invincible, and although he got but four clean strikeouts there was no vaudeville on the part of Jefferson men when once they reached the sacks. They generally stayed where they were, and staved the night. With "Hofier" Delaney confident that he had some regulars on the team with him, the old lad whizzed them down to second with such precision that not a sausage maker stole on him. Delaney was so good yesterday that with a man on third he caught one belligerent at second, and the Jeffersonian at third never dared to move.

Eberts in right field, accepted three wonderful chances with nary a miss, and he pulled one catch that brought the stands to the perpendicular. The Cards' first sack, moved into one that looked good for at least three bags and maybe all the way around when it scared high and long with a resounding crack. Eberts took one look into the air and turned and dashed out towards Milton. He kept running like a deer, and all at once he craned his neck, saw the sphere and heisting his lunch looks over his left shoulder he grabbed the ball—still running towards Milton. It was a wonderful catch.

Flene was reliable at the plate as well as on the mound. He worked "Big Ben" Benn, the erstwhile invincible, for a pass the first time up, and in two of a trio of appearances left banged two singles.

Goodman had hit to Benn and Meyer had been caught off third before the Cards opened up in the first and sent two tallies across. Knight laid down a short single over first and reached second when Meyer was caught off third, and later stole third himself. Cole walked and the "Heifer" pranced up and lifted one he liked for two sacks. Knight eased home from third and Cole romped home from second.

The Cards scored in the third and again in the sixth. Jefferson's lonely tally came in the seventh.

Knight opened with a single just far enough back of third to be an aggravation to Meyers in a crack and Groh in left field. Eberts laid one along the ground in the direction of Schulz, who fumbled, and Eberts was safe and Knight reached second.

Knight went to third when Flene hit back of short. Goodman failed to reach third on a missed third strike, and Meyers, next up, drove a short fly to right and Knight came home. Eberts attempted to stretch it from second, but Andre tagged him at the plate. Flene was caught taking third.

Kingston handled Benn's grounder in the seventh and threw him out easily. Knight took care of Schulz unassisted. Statz lammed one for two sacks, and traveled the remainder of the distance when Andre bombarded center field and rested on third, Statz scoring. That was all though. Right there Mister Flene settled down, and Jefferson didn't get another hit for the remainder of the session.

Statz and Andre did the heavy stick work for the visitors. Schulz was fair, but his two bagger in the second went for naught as Delaney and Flene were too careful of permitting anyone to get a lead off the sacks.

It was announced today that the same team would take the field next Sunday. The Watertown Gossings are scheduled for a game. The geese are league leaders now, and have met defeat but once this season. From now until about four o'clock Monday afternoon Langdon and Delaney will be chanting "beat Watertown." It'll be a cinch if the Cards display the brand of ball they did yesterday. It was big league stuff, and the Sox and Giants couldn't stage a better exhibition.

RED CROSS WEEK.

Proclamation by the President of the United States.
INASMUCH as our thoughts as a nation are now turned in united purpose towards the performance to the utmost of the services and duties which we have assumed in the cause of justice and liberty;

INASMUCH as but a small propo-tion of our people can have the opportunity to serve upon the actual field of battle, but all men, women and children alike may serve, and serve effectively, by making it possible to care properly for those who do serve under arms at home and abroad;

AND INASMUCH as the American Red Cross is the official recognized agency for voluntary efforts in behalf of the nation and for the administration of relief;

NOW THEREFORE, by virtue of my authority as President of the United States and President of the American Red Cross, I, Woodrow Wilson, do hereby proclaim the week ending June 25, 1917, as Red Cross week, during which the people of the United States will be called upon to give, generously and in a spirit of patriotic sacrifice for the support and maintenance of this work of national need.

WOODROW WILSON.
This nation has passed through the stage of registration day and ten million young men gave their answer to Germany by filing their names for service in the vast armies that are to be raised. This nation has sent word to Germany that the billions of this nation are behind the army and the fleet by the subscribing of the Liberty loan, and now we want to send another message to Germany that the people are behind the army and the fleet by raising a vast sum of money to be expended for Red Cross purposes.

One hundred million dollars is asked for and Janesville has its share to raise. Earnest and forceful men are behind the movement to raise this money, men working without wage, men who are neglecting their own business to join in the cause of humanity, and it is to be hoped their labors will not be in vain. Let us do our share, give what we can, and let us do it freely. It is a worthy cause and its value will become apparent as soon as actual war begins and American troops are in the battlefield. This is Red Cross week and remember it.

THE WORLD'S PREMIER

SECURITY.
What is the best security the world now offers to investors? It is, by all odds, the Liberty bond. It would be impossible to name anything else which could be placed in the same class. If it is not good, then nothing else is good. The United States is equally behind all its obligations, and in this essential respect a government bond differs from any other.
The investor who fails to take advantage of the loan offering has deprived himself of something for which he may well have to pay a premium when he realizes the opportunity he has lost.

Uncle Sam did not come, hat in hand, asking you for charity. He borrowed your money at the net rate of three and a half per cent, and if he subsequently pays a higher rate, the privilege of conversion will be yours.
The interest he pays you, moreover,
is net; and the only tax that can be exact will be when you are dead and don't care. The interest and the option together make the bond not only as good as cash in hand, but better. If you hide away a thousand dollar bill, you cannot cut off thirty-five dollars' worth of coupons every year.
This is neither the time nor the place to comment upon the mistakes of the treasury department in making the issue. The one point to insist upon is the quality of what it offered.
Time was when British consols, in spite of an increase of $1,000,000,000 due to the Boer war, enjoyed the highest credit in the world. They had none of the artificial aids of our own government issues of that time. But today the Liberty bond presses in.
Macaulay's famous phrase, "the world's greatest example of 'Eclipse first, and the rest nowhere'."

MILTON COLLEGE.
The residents of Rock county are glad to note the progress of Milton college. We feel a certain community pride in the institution only eight miles away from Janesville, bound to us by two railroads and an automobile highway—that it might be called Janesville's educational suburb. Many of our most useful residents were educated there. The late president of the Rock County Bar association was a graduate of the school. Several of our physicians and teachers received training there. A number of Janes-ville's brightest young people are in Milton college at the present time, and others are looking forward to entering in the near future. The val-uedictorians of the last two high school graduating classes are now students in our neighboring town. That was a deserved tribute paid by Prof. H. C.
Buell, formerly superintendent of schools in this city.

"Certain strong features should characterize the college which should be selected by a parent for the education and training of his children. First, the college in its traditions and in its present life should be grounded in Christian thinking and in Christian conduct. Secondly, it should be thoroughly democratic, not only in its teachings and in its detailed administration, but especially in the entire social life of its varied school activities. Third, it should hold up a high standard of scholarship and should bond every energy of its being toward bringing the young students up to this high plane of cultural attainment and scholastic efficiency."

"Such standards and such features are of being disagreeable."

I believe Milton college to possess in large measure. So great is my confidence in Milton's true worth and sincerity, that it is the college of my selection for the education of my own daughter."

KILL THE BILL.
A bill is now pending before the senate which provides for opening Lake Koshkonong for carp fishing.
The bill is being bitterly opposed by all the residents about the lake, as well as by many other people who are opposed to killing off the game fish by seining in a shallow lake. The bill should be killed.

Not satisfied with erecting signs saying "Good bye, come again," to departing motorists, many towns proceeded to speed the visitors on their way by bouncing them several feet in the air on their rough roads.

Those million men of W. J. Bryan's who were going to spring to arms before sunset must have failed to note that the sun has set some hundred times since the opportunity was offered.

Those pictures of arms and legs extended in four opposite directions are not exhibitions of the Wild West of Borneo, but merely the local tennis stars in the act of returning a swift ball.

Sir Douglas Haig's first words to General Pershing may after all be what the governor of North Carolina said, but the rest of the conversation would be worth billions to Germany.

It is reported that more generals are being killed for the Mexican army.
This will surprise the many people who regarded the Mexican army as composed wholly of generals.

The time is going to come when a 72-page edition of a metropolitan Sunday paper is going to be looked at as a pretty poor substitute for a heavy old spruce forest.

After denouncing the authority given to the president to fix food prices, the dealers proceed to fix them themselves one or two notches higher than ever before.

The people who are loafing around at the grocery store think it is mighty queer that Edison does not get busy and produce that device to sink the submarines.

It is not necessary for a June wedding present to be useful or tasteful, but if it looks as if it cost a lot of money, but didn't, it will go with a rush.

Many people who won't buy the United States bonds are going to give away their principal for the sake of one per cent more interest.

German spies are invited to attend Registration day exercises and send

LOTS MORE IN THE SEA.

Water Powers, late of Powers, Powerhouse and Co., accosted a wealthy-looking old gentleman in the Foolishick Library.
"Do you know there are 69,974 barber shops in the United States?"
Water gurgled softly.
"No?" said the old gent.
"Do you know there are 4,187 barber shops in England? Do you know there are 13,179 barber shops in Canada?" Water rippled calmly.
"Yes?"
"And do you know that felt hats are made from Weylandog hair?" Water roared deafeningly.
"No?" Yes-s?
"Well, I have a scheme to collect the 49 tons of hair that is carelessly fluffed to the six winds of Heaven and manufacture skinker hats.
Come on over to Bat's Restaurant and I'll explain further," and Water ran swiftly over.
At Bat's, after ordering two portions of terrapin and a bottle of rare old 1917 vintage, Water flowed rapidly on.
"Then after we manufacture the hats, we will collect the hair and sell it allover again as Powers' Powerful Hairoil!"
At the conclusion of this happy statement, Water Powers enthusiastically departed, leaving the old gent in a hypnotic sort of trance and the dinner check.

U. S. OXFORD STUDENTS
IN FIRST MILITARY DRILL.
[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Oxford, England, June 18.—The first drill or parade of American students taking the voluntary military training course here took place this afternoon. A platoon was organized, although the training is being given by British officers, no obligation has been incurred to join the British army. It is expected that the platoon will be recognized as an American war department unit and that the members will be transferred to the American army or expeditionary force at the most convenient time.
The London embassy has tabled in behalf of the members requesting such recognition.

While the students as yet form part of no army, they are probably the first Americans to be drilled on European soil.

ALL FRANCE GUTTED
BY TERRIBLE STRIFE;
WASTE, DESOLATION

NOTE—Here is the third and last battlefield story.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
With the British Armies in the field, June 18.—If America could know France today most likely American young men would flock to her aid by hundreds on every trans-Atlantic boat. The pity of those scores of villages behind the lines, entirely stripped of able men, and the women in deep mourning as they carry on the work of departed soldiers, would appeal more strongly to the pure American than miles of recruiting posters.

Hop into a military auto and go for a tour behind the fighting lines, over the ridges from which the wide landscape unfolds itself in a series of splendid terraces. The ride will convince you that the young men of the United States have before them a duty that can't be shrived without dishonor.
The car draws up at a railroad barrier where stands an elderly soldier of France, disabled in the war and now on light duty. He passes the car and you roll into the main street.
Here are women driving farm wagons, women herding sheep, women carrying burdens that would cause a strike of the moving-man's union back home. Children may be seen through the cottage doors, assuming the burdens of housework. Women and children, no men, except the disabled, it is the war.

That is a sample and typical of what is to be seen. The French are staid but they do need American help to whittle the Boche. Their disillusionment if America should fail would be hard to picture. Their faith is so great in America, the sister republic which honors Lafayette.

This is the district behind the lines. Up forward, where the war is, the Boche are so busy they have left. Civilian inhabitants are rare.
One scene of peace has been found before a French city by the Germans.
The British expect to take the place by the pressure of indirect movements, thus sparing the town from bombardment. If it is destroyed then Tommy will have another score to settle with the Boche dynamiting squad.

Before the town is a flat field of more than a mile. Underfoot are parches of dandelions. It is quiet and peaceful as a May day in Iowa.
Overhead an aeroplane drones like a lazy bee in its patrol along the sky.
Suddenly a battery wakes up and vague spot and the shells make dark spots against the haze on the German horizon. The Boche bestirs itself, evidently trying to find a British gun.
His gun thumps far away, there is an interval and then the shuttle is heard gradually growing louder.

"Here comes one," says a Tommy.
The shell drops a quarter of a mile away. "Dud," says Tommy. "Boche throws lots of duds."
Notre Dame de Lorette has come out green again after the terrific fighting there. Beyond is Vimy Ridge which the French fought so hard to take before the Canadians succeeded.
Vimy looks down on the Boche lines and far into the German occupied country. The day's battle of the ridge is churned unimaginably. The British are beyond the ridge nowadays and engineers are perfecting organizations behind the relentless advance.
When all the craters on the crest have remained a few dead who had been overlooked. They lay in their death postures amid their rusting equipment, and nearby were a few French men, memories of the fight that France made here.

The site of the chapel of Notre Dame de Lorette is peaceful now, though the chapel itself is a ruin.
In the old German trench that ran through the church the French soldier has put up a little plaster of paris group of the Holy Family, inscribed in words of innocent city.
Groupe de la Sainte Famille de la

Ears have been growing on each its use in hearing the ear has little

AGRICULTURAL and GARDEN DEP'T

ALLEN B. WEST, Director

Question—Can you tell me when is the right time to cut alfalfa? I am raising it for the first time and am wondering when to cut it. Do you advise using hay caps?
Answer—Alfalfa should be cut when the new shoots at the base of the plant start. This is usually when the alfalfa is in partial bloom. It is better, however, not to rely on the blossoms, but examine the growth for new shoots. If cut before the new shoots appear, the next crop is injured. If cut when the new shoots are high that they are cut, too, the next crop is injured also. Watch for the new shoots and then set the mower high enough so that they are cut leaving the alfalfa locally I should certainly use hay caps.

Question—The tears of one of my cats are cracked and sore. What can I do for them?
Answer—The first thing is, if possible, to remove the cause, which is no doubt, some irritation, such as dust, chaffing after wetting, or contact with cold water or with dirty water or damp flth when lying down.
They should be thoroughly cleaned and vaseline rubbed in, or a combination of equal parts of kerosene and oil of sweet almonds be applied. If this is not effective, 10 grains of balsam of Peru may be added to the salve.

Question—When should cucumbers be planted for pickles?
Answer—You may plant cucumbers for pickles any time after danger of frost is past. If you have not already planted them you had better do so soon. We are quite likely to have dry weather in July and cucumbers need moisture. If you have only a few hills it is a good plan to sink an old tomato can with holes in it in the ground near each hill and every night pour a little water into each can.
This will supply moisture necessary to the growth much better than sprinkling.

Things That Should be Done Now.
1. Lock out for current worms.
Don't let them get a start. You may have killed the first ones by spraying.
Keep a sharp lookout for more. The first sign of the pest is a small hole in the leaf. It is necessary to repeat the dose. Do it as often as these little pests appear.

2. Look out for potato bugs. Don't let them get a start either. If you get them at six inches high spray with Bordeaux for blight and add a scent of lead to discourage the bugs.

3. Hoe your garden at least once a week, if possible. Don't let weeds get the start on you. They have a good opportunity these wet days.

Prof. Moore of the University of Wisconsin gives good advice about tilling the soil.

The old adage, "A stitch in time saves nine," applies admirably to garden tilling. Many gardeners pay a heavy penalty for not tilling when garden conditions are most favorable for illage.

THREE MORE ACCIDENTS
IN EVANSVILLE SUNDAY

Evansville, June 18.—Early Sunday evening Leonard Stair, the twelve-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Stair on West Liberty street, was killed in a painful accident, which resulted in the amputation of his thumb and first two fingers of his left hand just below the first joint. Leonard had gone on an errand in the neighborhood of Leonard Park and it was there the accident occurred. Dr. Hielgeson assisted by Dr. Dennison, and Miss Needles, the nurse, amputated the fingers. The little lad was resting as comfortably as can be expected today.

Breaks Ribs. About midnight Saturday evening, Paddy Peters had two ribs broken in a fall at the coal shed. The injured man was taken to the depot where the C. & N. W. company's physician, Dr. P. B. Colony, who is acting in that position during the illness of Dr. Evans, saw him. His ribs were broken and later he was removed to the Evansville house.

Isabelle, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Roberts, while playing with her right arm at the elbow. A physician reduced the fracture and it is doing as nicely as can be expected.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Franklin have returned from a three weeks' trip in the northern part of the state, making the trip in their car.

The body of Harry Bowles, a former Evansville resident, will be brought to Evansville from Great Falls, Montana, where his death occurred last Friday. He died of tuberculosis, Tuesday for burial. The family lived here some years ago and moved from here to Stoughton where his name was on the list of the Great Falls, Montana, where his death occurred last Friday.

Dr. J. M. Evans does not gain as rapidly as his many friends would wish, for he is quite ill at his home on Main street.

Miss Olive Van Hise, a sister of President Van Hise of the university of Wisconsin and her niece, Miss Hart, of Demarest, Ga., were guests Saturday at the W. W. Gillies home. They were on their way to Madison.

Whitewater News

Whitewater, June 18.—A class of twenty-three will graduate this week from the high school. Last evening the class listened to the commencement sermon at the Methodist church.

Evening graduating exercises will be held at the Congregational church and Rev. C. H. Beale of Milwaukee will give an address on "The Man in the Saddle." Friday evening the alumni will hold their annual banquet and reunion at Guild hall.

Rev. L. R. Howard, S. N. Saveo, James Larkin and Charles Hill were home from Fort Sheridan Saturday and Sunday. The train here last evening was late, so that the boys could not get to camp before taps and it seemed to cause some worry.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Leam have been visiting friends near Tomahawk the past week.

Earl Knilians was a visitor at Babcock a few days last week.

Irwin Leishman spent Saturday with friends in Milwaukee.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Peterson left last week for York, Neb., and from there Mrs. Peterson will go to Portland, Ore., to visit her mother.

The trip to Nebraska was made by auto.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Winn and son, James, have gone to spend the summer at the J. Roberty farm near Leyden.

Grace Potter is visiting friends and relatives in Peoria, Ill.

Mrs. J. W. Hall, Mrs. C. W. Roby, Miss Sarah Niquet and Miss Florence Bassett have gone to Washington, D. C. They will remain some time and while there will occupy the home of Congressman Hayes of California, who is a cousin by marriage to Miss Bassett.

Mrs. P. M. Klug and two children have gone to make their home in Milwaukee.

Mr. and Mrs. Simon Bellman left last week with their daughter to make their home in Spokane, Wash.

Prof. George C. Shutt left Saturday for Montana, to look after his interests in the Bitter Root Valley.

Mrs. A. Salisbury has gone to Hamilton, Montana, to visit her son, Oliver and family.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Birge and son, Stanley of St. Louis, Mo., spent last week with friends here before going to their summer home at Charlevoix, Mich.

News Notes from Movieland

BY DAISY DEAN

Francis X. Bushman, winner of male beauty prizes and moving picture star who recently signed a long-term contract to play with Beverly Bayne, tried his hand at exactly thirty-seven vocations before he established himself in his life's work. He was in everything from clerking in a dry goods store, to working for a commercial house, from milking to riding tandem with his brother as a professional bicyclist. Born in Norfolk, Va., he moved with his parents to Baltimore when he was a boy. It was to Baltimore he returned when he achieved fame and fortune, where he purchased a large country estate, now known as "Bushman's," one of the show places of the community.

As a boy Bushman was exceedingly ambitious. Even in those days he nursed an ambition to go upon the stage. However, this was his third attempt at the profession. His first appearance in New York was in "The Red Mill" as the leading juvenile. He had similar roles in "At the Ritz" and in "The Millionaire."

Then in 1911 a former stage director induced him to join the Esanay company. He reluctantly accepted this engagement but he soon became a national screen favorite, appearing in more than 300 pictures. Beverly Bayne appeared with him in many of these features and has been co-starred with him since.

The Kaiser's Cinema Troops. The German army has established a "film office" at the front. Under its direction seven separate detachments of "cinema troops" devote their entire time to taking motion pictures. A staff of writers in the rear devotes itself to supplying headlines and titles. One of the first efforts of the "film office" is now on view in Berlin. It purports to show how the allies are "burning and desecrating" St. Quentin. The evident intention, of course, being to place the blame for the Germans' crimes on the allied troops.

A producer announces the completion of a cinema classic absolutely unrivaled in its field; a pictorialization of "Jack and the Beanstalk" which should prove an epoch of the screen.

There is one good thing about this rush to fill every screen with a patriotic theme; it sorts of crowds the week with friends here before going to their summer home at Charlevoix, Mich.

A NOVEL

CHAPTER III.

The Second Encounter.

Portia Stanton was late for lunch; so, after stripping off her jacket and gloves, rolling up her veil, and scowling at herself in an oblong mahogany-framed mirror, in the hall, she walked into the dining-room with her hat on. Seeing her mother sitting at the lunch-table, she asked, "Where's Rose?"

"She'll be down, presently, I think," her mother said. "Does your hat mean you're going back to the shop this afternoon?"

Portia nodded, pulled back her chair abruptly, and sat down.

"I thought that on Saturday . . ."

her mother began.

"Oh, I know," said Portia, "but that girl I've met isn't much good."

You'd have known them for mother and daughter anywhere, and you'd have had trouble finding any point of resemblance in either of them to the Amazonian young thing who had so nearly thrown a street-car conductor into the street the night before.

The mother's hair was very soft and white, and the eyes with which it was arranged indicated a certain humanness in it. There was something a little conscious, too, about her dress. If you took it in connection with a certain resolute amiability about her smile, you would be entirely prepared to hear her tell Portia that she was to talk on "Modern Tendencies" before the Florian club this afternoon.

A very real person, nevertheless, you couldn't doubt that. The marks of passionately held beliefs and eagerly given sacrifices were etched with undeniable authenticity in her face.

Once you got beyond a catalogue of features, Portia presented rather a striking contrast to this. Her hair was done with a severity that was

THIS MEDICINE WOMEN VALUE

Positively Relieves the Suffering.

More Convincing Proof.

When Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was first introduced, its curative powers were doubted and had to be proved. But the proof came, and gradually the use of it spread over the whole country. Now that hundreds of thousands of women have experienced the most beneficial effects from its use, its value has become generally recognized and it is now the standard medicine for women's ills.

The following letter is only one of the thousands on file.

Denison, Texas.—"I cannot feel that I have done my duty until I tell what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I suffered from female troubles so I could hardly drag around and do my work. I was very nervous, and had dizzy spells, heat flashes, and headaches until life was a burden. My husband brought me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I soon began to improve. I continued its use and am now free from all pains and aches that made life a burden. You may use this letter in any way you like for I want the world to know what a grand medicine Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is."

What a pity she doesn't know that Resinol would clear her skin fairly hostile. Her clothes were brusquely worn. Her smile, if not ill-natured—it wasn't that—was distinctly ironic. A very competent, good-looking young woman, just now drooping a little over the cold lunch.

"So Rose didn't come down this morning at all. Nothing particular the matter with her, is there?" asked Portia.

There was enough real concern in her voice to save the question from sounding satirical, but her mother's manner was a little apologetic when she answered it.

"No, I think not," she said. "But she was in such a state when she came home last night—literally wet through to the skin, and blue with cold. So I thought it wouldn't do any harm."

"Of course not," said Portia. "Rose is all right. She won't spoil badly."

"I'm a little bit worried about the loss of the poor child's notebooks," said her mother.

"I don't believe Rose is worrying her head off about them," said Portia.

The flush in her mother's cheeks deepened a little, but it was no longer apologetic. "I don't think you're quite fair to Rose, about her studies," she said. "If she doesn't seem always to appreciate her privilege in getting a college education as seriously as she should, you should remember her youth. She's only twenty."

"I'm sorry, mother," Portia interrupted contritely. "I didn't mean any harm anyway. Didn't she say the man's name was Rodney Aldrich?"

"I think so," her mother agreed. "Something like that."

"It's rather funny," said Portia. "It's hardly likely to have been the real Rodney Aldrich. Yet it's not a common name."

"The real Rodney Aldrich?" questioned her mother. But, without waiting for her daughter's elucidation of the phrase, she added, "Oh, there's Rose!"

The girl came up behind Portia and enveloped her in a big, lazy hug. "Back to work another Saturday afternoon, Angel?" she asked commiseratingly. "Aren't you ever going to stop and have any fun?" Then she slumped into a chair, heaved a yawning sigh, and rubbed her eyes.

"Tired, dear?" asked her mother. She said it under her breath in the hope that Portia wouldn't hear.

"No," said Rose. "Just sleepy!" She yawned again, turned to Portia, and, somewhat to their surprise, said: "Yes, what do you mean—the real Rodney Aldrich? He looked real enough to me. And his arm felt real—the one he was going to punch the conductor with."

"I didn't mean he was imaginary," Portia explained. "I only meant I didn't believe it was the Rodney Aldrich—who's so awfully prominent; either somebody else who happened to have the same name, or somebody who just—said that was his name."

"What's the matter with the prominent one?" Rose wanted to know. "Why couldn't it have been he?"

Portia admitted that it could, so far as that went, but insisted on an inherent improbability. A millionaire, the brother of Mrs. Martin Whitney, wasn't likely to be found riding in street cars.

"Millionaires have legs," said Rose. "I bet they can walk around like anybody else. However, I don't care who he is, if he'll send back my books."

Portia went back presently to the shop, and it wasn't long after that that her mother came downstairs clad for the street, with her "Modern Tendencies" under her arm in a leather portfolio. Her vaudeville, given with more confidence now that Portia was out of the house, was a strong recommendation that Rose stay quietly within doors and keep warm.

"I was going to, anyway," she said. "Home and beside for mine today."

The house was deserted except for Inga in the kitchen, engaged in the principal sporting event of her domestic routine—the weekly baking. Rose hadn't meant to go to sleep, but the detective story she tried to read was so flagrantly stupid that presently she tossed the book aside and began dreaming one of her own in which the heroine got put off a street-car in the opening chapter.

The telephone bell aroused her once or twice, far enough to observe that Inga was attending to it, so when the front-door bell rang she left that to Inga, too—didn't even sit up and swing her legs off the couch and try, with a prodigious stretch, to get herself awake, until she heard the girl say casually:

A Splendid, Lazy, Tossed Creature.
"Her ban right in the sitting-room!" So it fell out that Rodney Aldrich had, for his second vivid picture of her—the first had been, you will remember, when she had seized the conductor by both wrists, and had said in a blaze of beautiful wrath: "Don't dare touch me like that!"—a splendid, tossed creature, in a chaotic glory of chestnut hair, an unlaced middie-bouise, a plaid skirt twisted around her knees, and a pair of ridiculous red bedroom slippers, with red pompons on the toes. The creature was stretching herself with the grace of a big cat that had just been roused from a nap on the hearthrug.

If his first picture of her had been brief, his second one was practically a snapshot, because at sight of her, she flashed to her feet.

So, for a moment, they confronted each other about equally agitated, flushed up to the hair, and simultaneously and incoherently begged each other's pardon—neither could have said for what, the goddess out of the machine being Inga, the maid-of-all-work. But suddenly, at a twinkle she caught in his eye, her own big eyes narrowed and her big mouth widened into a smile, which broke presently into her deep-throated laugh, whereupon he laughed too and they shook hands and she asked him to sit down.

"It's too ridiculous," she said. "Since last night, when I got to thinking how I must have looked, wrestling with that conductor, I've been telling myself that if I ever saw you again, I'd try to act like a lady. But it's no use, is it?"

He said that he, too, had hoped to make a better impression the second time than the first. That was what he brought the books back for.

"I'm awfully sorry mother's not at home—mother and my sister Portia. They'd both like to thank you for looking after me last night. Because really you did, you know."

"There never was anything less altruistic in the world," he assured her. "I dropped off of that car solely in pursuit of a selfish aim. I'd enjoy meeting your mother and sister very much, but what I came for was to get acquainted with you."

She flushed and smiled. "Why, I'm nobody much to get acquainted with," she said. "Mother's the interesting one—mother and Portia. Mother's quite a person. She's Naomi Rutledge Stanton, you know."

"I know I ought to know," Rodney said, and her quick appreciative smile over his candor rewarded him for not having pretended.

"Oh," she said, "mother's written two or three books, and lots of magazine articles, about women—women's rights and suffrage, and all that. She's been—well, sort of a leader ever since she graduated from college, back in—just think!—1870, when most girls used to have—accomplishments—French, music, and washing extra, you know."

She said it all with a quite adorable seriousness, and his gravity matched hers when he replied: "I would like to meet her very much. Feminism's a subject I'm blankly ignorant about."

"I don't believe," she said thoughtfully, "that I'd call it feminism in talking to mother about it, if I were you. Mother's a suffragist, but—there came another wave of faint color along with her smile—but—well, she's awfully respectable, you know."

She didn't seem to mind his laughing out at that, though she didn't join him.

"What about the other interesting member of the family," he asked presently, "your sister? Which is she, a suffragist or a feminist?"

"I suppose," she said, "you'd call Portia a feminist. Anyway, she hasn't time to talk about it much. You see, she's a business woman. She's a house decorator. She tells you what kind of furniture to buy, and then she sells it to you. Portia's terribly clever and awfully independent."

"All right," he said, "that brings us down to you. What are you?"

She sighed. "I'm sort of a black sheep. I guess. I'm just in the university. But I'm to be a lawyer."

Whereupon he cried out so explosively that she fairly jumped. Then he apologized and said the notion of her in court trying a case—he was a lawyer himself—seemed rather startling.

She sighed again. "And now I suppose," she said, "you'll advise me not to be."

"Not a bit," he said. "It's the finest profession in the world."

But he said it off the top of his mind. Down below, it was still engaged with the picture of her in a dismal courtroom, blazing up at a jury the way she had blazed up at that conductor.

"I suppose," she hazarded, "that it's awfully dull and tiresome, though, until you get 'way up to the top."

That roused him. "It's awfully dull when you do get to the top, or what's called the top—being an excellent caretaker of a few big corporations and rich estates going through your office like grist through a mill. That's supposed to be the big reward, of course."

He was out of his chair now, tramping up and down the room. "The thing to bear in mind, if you're going to travel that road, is that a case is worth while in a precise and unalterable ratio to the amount of money involved in it. If you question that axiom at all seriously, you're lost. That's what happened to me."

He pulled up with a jerk, looked at her and laughed. "If my sister Fredericka were here," he explained, "she would warn you that now was the time for you to ask me if I'd been to see Maude Adams or something like that."

She smiled in a sort of contented amusement. Then the smile transmuted itself into a look of thoughtful gravity, and there was a long silence which, though it puzzled him, he made no move to break.

At last she pulled in a long breath, turned straight to him, and said: "I wish you'd tell me what happened to you."

And, under the compelling sincerity of her, for the next two hours and a half, or thereabouts, he did—told it as he had never told it before.

He told her how he had started at the foot of the ladder in one of the big successful firms of what he called "elient caretakers." He told of his discovery of a real legal problem and of the passionate enthusiasm with which he had attacked it, the thrilling weeks of labor he had put upon it.

U. S. WAR CAPITAL CONFIDENT, GRAVE

Washington, June 18.—Washington as a war capital is a city of patriotism, enthusiasm and absolute confidence.

It is like a big college town on the eve of an important football game. In which everybody is positive the home team will win.

As yet it has none of the darkened streets and bereaved homes of London and Paris, none of the food regulations and casualty lists of Berlin and Vienna and no hint of the anarchy and riots which have hit Petrograd.

The city is aflutter with flags, and at night searchlights pick out the Stars and Stripes floating over many buildings. The thump of the war drum is frequently heard. The crash of martial music stirs historic Pennsylvania avenue. Soldiers and sailors mingle with the crowds, but they attract but little attention. Bugles sound, the shrill life rings over the noise of traffic as the citizens go about their "business as usual."

In the midst of the most important period since southern armies smashed at the capitol's defenses fifty years ago, Washington refuses to believe there is cause for anything more than a feeling of implicit confidence that with every man and woman "in the play" the Kaiser will be soundly thrashed and war's dark side will never throw a shadow over its gay street.

There are guards at the government buildings, where official passes or permits are demanded. This about sums up the war atmosphere visible to the casual observer in Washington.

Underneath it all there is the real, grim push of preparation for the titanic conflict, but these activities do not crop out on the surface. The people radiate confidence. Their attitude towards the great army now in process of organization is "Eat 'em up, boys, and get home soon. We'll wait for dinner."

Some people there are who have a peculiar dislike for the men who occupy certain positions. There is the chap who can't stand the sight of a policeman, for instance; others are driven to a state bordering on insanity if a cabman dares to address them. With Mr. Narker it was barbers. He hated the whole tribe or hairdressers, and he didn't hide his hate under any bushel, either. However, he possessed a certain amount of hair, and, as he could not cut it himself, he was obliged occasionally to resort to the den of a member of the hated clan.

A few days ago he entered a hairdresser's establishment and with a surly "Hair-cut-and-quick-about-it!" sat down in a chair. Now, the barber was a chatty fellow, as is the custom in his trade, and he did not say a word. After a few preliminary touches he ventured on a remark. "Hair very thin on top, sir," he said.

"Very glad to hear it!" granted Narker. "Hate fat hair myself."

And the barber never smiled again.

For three successive nights the new and proud father had walked the floor with the baby. On the fourth night he became desperate and on arriving from the office unwrapped a bottle of soothing syrup.

"Oh, James," exclaimed his wife, when she saw the label, "what did you buy that for? Don't you know it is very dangerous to give a child anything like that?"

"Don't worry," was the husband's tired reply. "I'm going to take it myself."

Young Fur Seals.

From the ages of one to four years fur seals are extremely playful. They are marvelous swimmers and frolic about in pursuit of one another, now diving deep and then, one after the other, suddenly leaping high above the surface in graceful curves, like porpoises. Squids and fish of various species are their main food. Their chief natural enemy is the killer whale, which follows their migrations and haunts the sea about their breeding ground, taking heavy toll among them.

Concerning the Serious Problem of Gasoline

Your interest is threefold—
That your car shall run—
That it shall run well—
That it shall run economically—all wholly dependent upon gasoline. The interest of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana lies solely in supplying you with the best gasoline in the world. You have listened, no doubt, to the preachments on high-test gasoline and high-gravity gasoline. They may be disposed of with the flat statement—

Gravity or test, whether high or low, means the density of gasoline as compared with water, and has nothing whatsoever to do with efficiency.

The only measure for the efficiency of gasoline lies in the "boiling points", or rather in the adjustment of the range of boiling point fractions. The gasoline with perfect adjustment and continuous range is

Red Crown Gasoline

Everywhere and Everywhere the Same

Red Crown Gasoline contains the correct number of low boiling point fractions to insure easy starting when the engine is cold.

Red Crown Gasoline contains the correct number of intermediate boiling point fractions to insure smooth acceleration and a steady flow of power.

Red Crown Gasoline contains the correct number of high boiling point fractions to insure the development of a maximum of power—all that your engine was designed to deliver.

Red Crown Gasoline gives more power, more speed, and more miles per gallon.

The Standard Oil Company guarantees its uniformity no matter where you get it.

It always burns with a quick, snappy explosion.

Two Heroes.

Miss Martineau in her "History of the Thirty Years' Peace" tells a touching story of the wreck of the Rothesay Castle. "Two men, strangers to each other, found themselves holding on to the same plank, which, it soon appeared, would support only one." Each desired the other to hold on, the one because his companion was old, the other because his companion was young, and they quitted their grasp at the same moment. By extraordinary accidents both were saved, each without the knowledge of the other, and they met on shore in great surprise. Few greetings in the course of human life can be so sweet and moving as must have been that of these two heroes."

HUMPHREY

INSTANTANEOUS

AUTOMATIC GAS WATER HEATER

ONE WEEK ONLY!

Automatic Gas Water Heater Demonstration

Although the operation of the Automatic Water Heater seems magical, there is nothing mysterious about its action. Absolutely dependable, it is always ready to deliver steaming hot water, at any time, winter or summer. It's economical too, costing less than two cents for a luxurious bath. When hot water is desired, simply open any "Hot" faucet in the house and in less than sixty seconds the water is steaming—not even a match to strike. The gas is burning only while the water flows; when the faucet is closed the gas goes out.

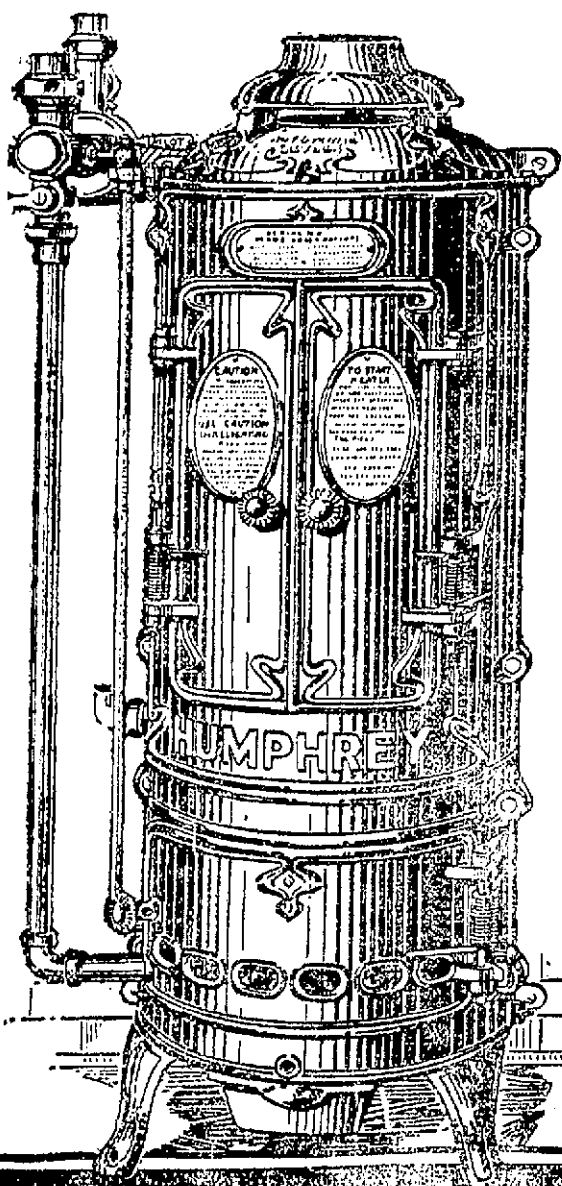

You have wanted Automatic Hot Water Service for a long time! Don't delay any longer, but ask us what size heater will supply your wants.

30 DAY TRIAL

If at the end of one month the heater fails to fulfill our claims we will remove it and refund any money you have paid. Try one out and convince yourself that it is The Heater for you.
